About Center for the Arts, Eagle Rock

Center for the Arts, Eagle Rock is a unique exhibition venue located in a historic 1913 Spanish Colonial Revival building, a former Carnegie Library. We are a non-profit 501(c) 3 organization whose mission is to provide multicultural, innovative, and local arts programming to Northeast Los Angeles and surrounding communities. The Center is dedicated to supporting artists in reaching both traditional and non-traditional audiences. Programs of Center for the Arts Eagle Rock include the Eagle Rock Music Festival, free and low-cost after school arts classes for children, concerts, exhibitions, a Summer Art Camp, and more.

Delivery of artwork and liability information

After notification of acceptance into the exhibition, work must be delivered to the Center between April 28 + May 2, 2008. Artwork must remain installed until exhibition closes on June 14, 2008. Artwork must be picked up during business hours June 16-19, 2008.

Work must be delivered and picked up during designated dates and during business hours unless other arrangements have been made and agreed upon in advance. Work can be returned via Fed Ex if shipping has been pre-paid by the artist.

Center for the Arts, Eagle Rock will take no responsibility for artwork left after those dates and will consider the work abandoned.

Insurance (not exceeding $5,000.00) applies only to the duration of exhibition.

Any special installation instructions must be provided with the work in advance of installation. Without such instruction, the Center will take no responsibility as to how the work is installed, or if, because of its installation it is damaged. Artwork must be ready to hang.

Center for the Arts is a multi-use facility, so the artwork must occasionally be moved for events, but every precaution is taken to protect the artwork.

The exhibition committee is solely responsible for the exhibition design and placement of the artwork.
